

Abstract

A process for the production of vitamin D₃ or previtamin D₃ from an isomer mixture comprises carrying out a separation by column chromatography using supercritical or liquid 5 carbon dioxide, optionally with a modifier, as the mobile phase and an optionally modified silica gel as the stationary phase.